Paul and Shelly Schweiger

Schweiger Farms has been in the family since July 21, 1881 and is a Wisconsin Century Farm. Paul and Shelly Schweiger started ownership in the farm with John and Marge Schweiger (Paul's parents) in 1990 and are the 6th family members to own this land. The farm has had many transitions over the years and land has been added. In the early days the farm was a turkey and dairy farm, had a saw mill and two maple sugar camps. In 1984 the dairy cows were sold and they raised beef and dairy replacement heifers. Today they mainly have black and red Angus with both registered and commercial animals. They also raise and sell bred Angus replacement heifers and yearling bulls. The farm also finishes out their own steers in addition to purchasing select feedlot cattle. The crops they raise are corn, soybeans, alfalfa, and winter wheat/rye which is used to feed their livestock and excess crops are sold locally. Today, Schweiger Farms is owned and operated by Paul and Shelly along with their three children Derek (23), Courtney (17) and John (13).
